Several possible alignments at Karnak were proposed by Lockyer, and two involved the sun. To the northwest, the Great Temple of Amun-Re faced the summer solstice sunset, and, in the opposite direction, was the winter solstice sunrise. Temples opening to the southwest were, in fact, built beyond the back wall of the main temple. (Griffith Observatory)